Midnight Raid Here Nets 18 Gallons

Hickey Is Taken, Another Man Flees Under Pistol Fire

John Turner and Hugh Bearden Seize Cargo in Hope

2 SHOTS ARE FIRED

Whisky Believed to Have Come From Miller County

One man was held in jail here Tuesday while officers sought a second after hitting a liquor-laden automobile here late Monday night when contained 18 gallons of moonshine.

The man in jail was said by officers to be Dewey Hickey. He surrendered peacefully. Officers said a man believed to be Claude Dobson leaped from the car and escaped when they approached.

Two shots were fired at the fleeing man, but apparently neither took effect.

The cargo of liquor, believed to have been transported here from Miller county, was stopped near Hope Steam Laundry by Officers John Turner and Hugh Bearden.

Second Big Raid

The officers had laid in wait near Luck's Tourist camp and when the car approached from the direction of Fulton about midnight, officers gave chase, halting the car near the laundry building.

The whisky was in kegs and jugs. Hickey, who was lodged in jail, will face charges of possessing and transporting liquor on which no tax had been paid, officers announced.

Monday night was the second unsuccessful attempt to smuggle illicit liquor into Hempstead county within the past three days.

Last Saturday Sheriff Bearden and deputies intercepted a cargo of booze on the northeast side of Hope, capturing two men and seizing 50 gallons.

Friday Last Day for Applications

County Agent Warns Producers Against Cotton Gin Tax

According to Frank R. Stanley, county agent, Friday, May 31, is the last day for producers in Hempstead county to sign applications for exemption certificates to gin cotton in 1935.

It is absolutely necessary for all producers growing cotton to make application for exemption certificates or pay a tax on all cotton ginned.

Bulletins

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Assistant Attorney General Guy E. Williams held Tuesday that no further claims for circuit court expense could be allowed in Clark county. Williams ruled under amendment 10 and the Supreme Court's decisions constraining that no further claims, even though for necessary expenses, could be allowed since Clark county has already exceeded its appropriation for court expenses this year.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Congressional leaders meeting with Agricultural Secretary Wallace decided Tuesday that AAA amendments pending before the senate must be completely re-written to make them conform with the United States Supreme Court decision Monday on NRA activities.

WYNNE, Ark.—(AP)—Aubrey Lancaster, 40, was granted $10,000 bond in his hearing before Judge Cooper Tuesday in connection with the slaying of Tom Williams, negro share-cropper, near Parkin.

Sheriff Bearden Nabs Hi-Jacker

Fugitive Wanted in Smackover Is Taken Monday Night

Sheriff Jim Bearden announced Tuesday that Albert Holt, 30, was held in jail here for Smackover officers on a robbery charge.

Holt was arrested at 8:30 p. m. Monday when Sheriff Bearden and deputies surrounded a lonely shack in the Little Mississippi river bottom in Redland township.

Holt surrendered peacefully. Officers said he had been living alone on the edge of the river banks for the past several days. He was to be turned over to Smackover officers Tuesday afternoon.

Sheriff Bearden said that Holt was wanted for hi-jacking a shoe-cobbler about two weeks ago.

Search Widens for Kidnapers

Hunt for George Weyerhaeuser Is Intensified—Four Sought

TACOMA, Wash.—(AP)—A secret search for the kidnapers of George Weyerhaeuser, 9, reached across an international boundary Tuesday with remnants of the Alvin Karpis and Ma Barker-Gun Kelley gangs sought as possible suspects.

That statement was one of a few partially disclosed moves in the hunt for a gang of criminals that demand $200,000 ransom for the return of the lumber heir.

Two Tacoma detectives hurried to Vancouver, B. C., in response to a woman's report of seeing a boy resembling the kidnaped youngster riding with four men in a travel-stained automobile last Saturday.

Four Are Sought

TACOMA, Wash.—(AP)—At least three men, and a woman, are sought in the kidnaping of George Weyerhaeuser, it was learned Monday night as the parents of the 9-year-old heir to a timber empire made another desperate effort to start negotiations over the $200,000 ransom demand.

In revealing official assumptions concerning the size of the kidnap band, a high state police official who asked his name be withheld asserted a woman wrote the ransom note.

"Vengeful radicals," he added, are being considered as possible perpetrators of the crime.

Radicals are among the suspects he said, because of rumors of fancied wrongs from the wealthy timber family, whose interests are involved in a widespread northwest lumber workers' strike.

"Understand," said the official, "that anyone over the age of 16 was eligible to enter the school."

Convicted Hope Man Starts Term

Charles Crosnoe Obtains Commitment and Then Reports

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Charlie Crosnoe of Hope, convicted in Bradley county of arson in connection with the burning of a gin at Banks in April, 1934, personally applied to the clerk of the Arkansas Supreme Court Monday for his commitment papers and two hours later surrendered himself to Supt. Tom C. Cogbill at the penitentiary farm at Tucker to begin serving a six-year sentence.

The Supreme Court affirmed the conviction several weeks ago and Governor Futrell granted a 30-day stay of sentence to permit Crosnoe to appear as a witness in a civil suit growing out of the gin burning. The stay was extended five days because the trial had not been completed when the 30 days expired.

Crosnoe attracted wide attention soon after the 30-day stay was granted by filing with State Insurance Commissioner U. A. Gentry and Prosecuting Attorney Ned A. Stewart a list of arson cases involving persons, who, he said, had employed him to burn their property.

The Hempstead county grand jury investigated the matter but refused to return indictments on the ground that there was no evidence to corroborate Crosnoe's statements.

Conviction of Ben F. Wilson, a gin salesman, in connection with the Bradley county case, was reversed by the Supreme Court because there was no independent evidence to corroborate Crosnoe's testimony that Wilson had hired him to burn the gin.

Red Passes Crest at Garland Bridge

Reports From Fulton Say Stream Is Falling Rapidly

Crest of the flood tide in Red River appeared to have moved below Garland City, with the reported stage Tuesday of 33 feet. Bridge attendants at the highway toll bridge stated that the river had fallen a little at that point.

This was taken as an indication that the highest water has been registered at that point unless there should be further heavy rains before much more of the present flood passes off.

Levees on both sides of the river were said by R. V. Hall, levee engineer to be holding well and the only difficulty seemed to be in the vicinity of Garland City at the Cotton Belt bridge, however, on the Lafayette county side, where several boats of the trestle work leading to the railroad bridge had gone out Saturday, thereby forcing the suspension of traffic over this line.

Railroad officials were quoted as stating that instead of replacing the trestling with new beams and ties, that it is probable piers will be sunk and another span will be erected to carry traffic over this line.

Audit Complete, Figures Reveal Big Improvement

Decrease in Liabilities Current Year Shows $21,213.35

PLANT SUPPLIES 64 %

Taxes, License, Fees and Fines Furnish Only 36 Per Cent

An analysis of the city's audit, a condensed statement of which is published elsewhere in this paper, shows that for the first time in a great many years, the city is free from all indebtedness.

While the city had an operating loss of $15,139.04 for the fiscal year, this loss was covered by a transfer of funds from the water and light accounts to the general account.

A total of $40,737.38 was transferred from the water and light account to the general fund to cover the retirement of a $15,000 indebtedness of long standing that was costing the city 6 per cent interest whereas, the cash reserve, from which this money was taken, was earning but 3 per cent, a gain of 3 per cent for the city, or $450 per year.

In addition to the above amount, the city drew $2100 per month, for a total of $25,200 to assist in meeting current expenses.

Vast Improvement
The city's current position has been vastly improved during the past fiscal year is best illustrated by the following figures taken from the complete audit.

The increase in the current assets of the fiscal year ending March 31, 1935, over the previous fiscal year was $4,495.45.

The decrease in the current liabilities and deferred income for the same period was $21,213.35, making a net improvement in the city's financial condition of $25,708.80. This increase in the current position occurred after the transfer of $40,737.38 was made from the water and light fund to the general fund.

Plant Contributes Heavily
An interesting fact brought out in the audit is that the water and light plant supplied 64 per cent of the city's income while county taxes, city licenses, fees and fines contributed only 36 per cent.

This difference in revenue percentages is unusual for the fiscal year, due to the drawing of funds to pay old outstanding debts. Ordinarily, the general fund will draw about 50 per cent of its income from the water and light fund.

The largest single item of expense is salaries, which account for two-

Markets

New Orleans
NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Cotton broke a dollar a bale at the opening of the market Tuesday as traders sized up the far-reaching influences of Monday's NRA decision.

First call prices were 15 to 20 points lower, with all positions sharing in the decline. Selling did not appear to be coming from any particular source or locality, but was general in character.

Liverpool came in weak before the start of trading here and advices from abroad indicated the opinion was strong there that the agricultural adjustment administration might share the same fate as the NRA.

As the first hour progressed the early declines were extended and July lost a maximum of 22 points to 11.70. October was off 25 points at 11.30 and December was 29 points lower at 11.39.

Trading picked up on the decline, but profit-taking and short covering absorbed most of the offerings and kept the down-trend orderly.

New York
NEW YORK.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened easy, 16 to 35 lower under heavy liquidation and foreign selling on the Supreme Court's decision in regard to the NRA. Lower Liverpool cables. July 11.79; October 11.49; December 11.50; January 11.51; March 11.51, May 11.46.

The decision raised questions of the legality of certain phases of the agricultural control program according to trade opinion and it was also expected to modify proposed amendments to the AAA now under consideration in congress. Selling was quite general and heavy with initial decline uncovering some confidential sources were credited to the unsettled monetary situation abroad. October sold off from 11.49 to 11.41 with the general list easing to net losses of 25 to 36 points. The lower level attracted renewed trade, price fixing, covering and local support but rallies up to the end of the first hour had been limited to about two to five points from the lows. Liverpool also reported general selling.

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Parent May Be Worse Problem Than Child.

We hear a lot nowadays about the problem child. But many doctors are even more concerned with the problem parent.

The old-fashioned father and the old-fashioned doctor are convinced that the child who turns out best is the one who has had a reasonable amount of parental discipline and control. A good old-fashioned English doctor said that parents have to learn that the proper place to train a child is in the home.

If the home does not train him, the school has to train him; if the school does not train him, the world has to; if the world does not, the jail has to. Each one of the masters involved is likely to be harder and harder, and each one may make less likely the possibility of complete success.

There are two points of view nowadays as to whether the psychologist and the psychoanalyst ought to be educating the women's clubs and the parent-teachers' associations into the mysteries of the child. Psychology and emotional relationships represent today one of the most involved and difficult phases of mental science.

The question arises as to whether parents are made better or worse by a little knowledge in this field, particularly when we realize the age-old proverb that a little knowledge is dangerous.

One of the difficulties which has recently arisen is represented by the trembling mother who comes to the doctor wondering whether her attitude toward the child will produce an inferiority complex, and asking the doctor if she should not be a little less firm.

Training is absolutely necessary for the inexperienced mind of the child. This is particularly true in our modern civilization in which children are not allowed to roam freely in the community, but in which they are likely to receive the vast majority of their training from the parents, nurses, governesses, or domestics about the home.

An eminent English doctor calls attention to a new condition which is called parental hypochondriasis. It refers to the type of parent who spends a lot of time worrying about the relationship of his children and who has finally developed the idea of following consultations with amateur psychoanalysts and similar people, the fear of a healthy child is a task of superhuman difficulty.

time mining camps. In his restlessness, his physical courage, his breezy resourcefulness, his sureness of aim, and his propensity for hard living—he was shot to death in a saloon while still a comparatively young man—he is the romantic old westerner incarnate, and his biography is a fine and salty story. ## YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Healthier Circus Grounds Would Protect Children

All the world loves a circus. And circus people seem to love all the world. Busy as they are, they take time to visit children's hospitals and homes and give off-the-record performances for little shut-ins.

For me the yearly pilgrimage still holds the old magic. Perhaps, as we grow older, we are more conscious of the wheels and strings, the mechanics of showmen, but even so, there is no place where one comes quite so close to wonderland.

Watching the next to impossible, giving oneself over to sheer fun and digging up emotions one thought had turned up their toes years ago, is the best of spring trips.

Whether you go or not concerns me not at all except that I am always sorry anyone has to miss a good show, especially a child.

Shunted to Bad Sites

My object in holding forth on the glorious of carnival does not concern the price of admission. I know no circus people. It concerns instead the cities—and my own is one—that seems to take unholy joy in dumping visiting circuses in grounds that must make even the elephants weep with shame.

Usually these shows, big and little, pay a tax to the municipality they are in. It is a right enough, because they do take shovels out of town (and that has become here to Chambers of Commerce everywhere) and interfere temporarily with local entertainment.

Yet circuses, usually, are pitched on property that no timid person would voluntarily walk over. Thousands drag themselves over railroad switches, through lakes of mud, over piles of debris, through storm and darkness that lay them bruised and sniffling in bed next day without one single regret. They save the circus.

Treated Like Plagues Picture the life of circus people who move from one scene to another almost daily. It seems too bad. True, animals and heavy wagons are hard on property, but not that hard. Cities like New York and Boston have their regular circus buildings, and some other cities give their visiting performers excellent clean sites on which to pitch camp. In still others it looks as though the advance agent had asked for quarters for a visiting locust colony.

Particularly, I am surprised at the patience of townfolk who submit to it year after year and say nothing. For the children's sake alone, approaches should be made, and the footing made dry and clean.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Beautiful Weather—Simpler Routines Keep You Looking Good

This is the time of year when simple beauty routines suffice. The warm breezes do not dry out your skin as did the cold winds of last winter. The afternoons you spend in the sunshine tend to keep you more healthy and therefore much better looking. You can put in a minimum amount of hours in front of the mirror and just let nature do the rest.

Substitute a bi-weekly game of golf or some other outdoor sport for the usual setting-up exercises. Ride a horse, swim or play tennis to get rid of that excess weight on stomach and hips. Don't overdo, of course, but keep out in the sunshine as much as possible.

You can use more cold lotions and fewer heavy creams. Be sure, however, to keep a suntan lotion on hand and to apply it whenever you expect to spend a good deal of time in hot sunshine. Cuticle oil and hand lotions are necessities, too. Active sports are

Varieties Given for Late Planting

Possibilities for Abundant Feed Crop This Year

Wet weather this spring has delayed planting of some of the rented acres and other acres to feed crops. Fortunately, a considerable part of the feed crop acreage was planted before the rainiest period during May, says Frank Stanley, county agent.

The acreage already planted, supplemented with later plantings, offers possibilities for an abundant feed crop this year, Mr. Stanley stated.

There is no special need yet for selecting varieties of crops especially adapted to late planting. Varieties of corn which produce well when planted early are suitable for planting in early June, but if planting is done later than early June, Mexican Junco corn is a good variety.

Most varieties of soybeans may be planted in early June. If planting is done much later than early June, the Virginia, which is somewhat earlier than the best varieties for early planting, is preferable. The Laredo variety is somewhat later than the Virginia but is earlier than either the Biloxi or Ochoan varieties.

Cowpeas are better adapted to very late planting than soybeans. The common varieties of cowpeas such as Whippoorwill, Groat, Brabham, and New Era are adapted to planting any time in June. The earliest variety is New Era.

"If there should be a rush in planting feed crops," Mr. Stanley said, "due to continued wet weather in June, cowpeas or a mixture of cowpeas and amber sorghum may be sown broadcast with assurance that such a mixture will yield a good feed crop."

Even though wet weather has delayed the planting of food and feed crops on rented acres, Mr. Stanley advised farmers who have as yet not planted ample crops to meet their food and feed needs to do so as quickly as weather and other farm work will permit. He explained that the need for such crops on Hempstead county farms could not be overestimated.

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel Elliott © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY KATHARINE STRYKER, daughter of wealthy VICTOR STRYKER, is deeply attracted by MICHAEL HEATHERS, who runs a riding school. Katharine is discontented and restless under her stepmother's rule. Thrown from a horse, she is taken to the home of VIOLET HEATHERS, who once was in love with Katharine's father. Violet is drawn to the girl and they become friends.

DR. JOHN KAYE, just back from Europe, visits the STRYKERS.

ZOE PARKER, Katharine's closest friend, is in love with GIBBS LARKIN, and persists in seeing him in spite of her parents' objections. Katharine tells Dr. Kaye to help her keep Zoe from eloping with Gibbs. They take Zoe to a night club where she sees Gibbs with a notorious woman. Zoe threatens to do away with herself.

The same night Michael is inveigled into taking SALLY MOON to the same club.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII "LOOK," Sally coaxed brightly, "if you come along with me to the Club for a bit probably Father will be home by the time we get back. Then you can see him and talk to him."

"I don't like to see you in a place of that sort," Michael Heatheros argued.

"Michael, that's terribly sweet of you," Sally's dimples faded. In their place a grave wistfulness brooded. "I do—I mean I! I think that's terrible, sweet. But don't you see I'll be perfectly all right with you, there? You're so very strong, Michael..."

Her voice was soft. Her brown, liquid eyes were luminous. For the moment Sally was all woman. She was Grace in a pink lace dress. "All right," Michael said grudgingly. "But I'm against it, don't forget that."

"You're a lamb," She laid a fluttering, warm hand on his wrist. "I'll do something for you some time. Besides Father will be pleased. He said you were such a sterling young man. Honestly, that was what he said."

"Thanks," said Michael, getting red and feeling a fool. But it was all right if Sally said such things to him when there was no one else to hear. She was, really, a sweet little thing. She said the first thing that came into her head.

So it was that as Katharine's car turned out of the driveway of the Bath Club, Sally's drive in Michael saw Katharine. He caught a glimpse of Dr. Kaye's side her, his thin, aristocratic face sharply cut above the black and white of his dinner clothes.

Sally, driving rather intently, did not see them. "Here we are," she cried gaily, jumping out. "Michael, we'll let the man park it, shall we? I don't know exactly where..."

But the doorman was not in sight. A waiter, looking rather wild-eyed, ran to the door, inspected them and ran back again. "Isn't he queer?" Sally marveled.

MICHAEL pushed open the big, grilled door and went in. The marble-floored hall was empty. A hat check girl appeared from nowhere. She, too, looked rather disheveled. She viewed the newcomers with something like suspicion.

"Will someone find me a table, please?" Sally demanded with hauteur. "Miss Moon!"

There was a doorman, after all. He came on the run. "What goes on here, anyhow?"

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

Let's Go Behind the Scenes in a Movie Studio

HOLLYWOOD—"I'm going to the RKO studio. You can get me there, if you want me."

And with that little fib—you never can find anyone once he disappears into one of Hollywood's gigantic film factories—let's climb into the old rattle and chug down Melrose avenue.

There's the studio now. Not very imposing from the outside. Just a 10-foot tin snuff wall with billboards, advertising the latest RKO films on top. Two blocks up Gower street, the wall meets the three-story administration building.

That's where we enter—if we're lucky. The gray-haired fellow at the information desk is so used to keeping people out of the studio that he doesn't like to pass even those with business inside.

Passing through the administration building, we reach a miniature park. It is the only spot of green in the whole studio—and real, not a set. The remainder of the huge tract is covered with buildings or asphalt paving.

Day's "Attractions"

A glass-enclosed callboard reveals that all today's activity is concentrated at the north end of the studio on stages eight, nine, and ten. We stroll past the long two-story dressing room building toward the enormous bannister-like structures at the extreme end of the lot.

The large Venetian set for "Top Hat" covers stages nine and ten. As we pass through the heavy soundproof door, it's like arriving on another continent. Half a dozen gondolas, a motorboat, and a rowboat are floating on a canal which flows under two arched bridges and extends past the beautiful terrace of a large hotel. The whole set is done in white and various shades of blue. On the screen it is white and shaded gray.

Ginger Rogers, wearing a bright green bathing suit, is sitting in her portable bungalow—a box-like coop just big enough for a couch, one chair, and a dressing table. Scores of extras are wandering about the set or chatting in small groups. Some of the girls are wearing summery afternoon dresses, others attractive evening gowns. The men are attired in white flannels or tuxedos.

Waiting for Camera A cameraman, his assistant, and several electricians are up on the hotel terrace setting up for a close shot of Ginger and Fred Astaire at a table. Their stand-ins are there now. Fred and Ginger won't take their places until everything is ready.

Director Mark Sandrich strolls over to ask how we like the set. "On the screen you'll see the Venice skyline through there," he explains, indicating the right side of the hotel terrace. "They're painting it now."

Astaire, looking the height of dignity in a tuxedo, comes along and interrupts with, "What was wrong with me this morning, Mark? I was awful. The lines weren't hard, either. I ran through them before I came on the set and thought they were a cinch. But when I got in front of the camera—I don't know, I just couldn't get 'em out right."

"Don't worry, Fred," Mark replies. "I'm shooting the same scene this afternoon from a different angle and you'll get it then."

Change of Scenery

Looks as though it will be some time before there will be any shooting here. So we might as well wander over to stage eight and watch them do a scene for "Old Man Rhythm." It's only a few steps away.

This is another big set, supposedly a college campus. Imitation grass, with gravel paths, covers the entire floor space. In the center is a tall, gurgling fountain. A few big trees dot the campus. Around the edge are faces of various buildings. A number of your extras, dressed as students, are loitering around.

Let's walk across the campus to get a better view of the scene being shot at the fire side. It's a quartet of girls—Betty Grable, Grace Bradley, J. J. Hodges, and Evelyn Poe. They're supposed to be serenading some boys on a balcony above. But a camera and its crew occupies the balcony now.

The camera has no blimp (sound proof hood) and the microphone is covered up. The sound for this scene already must have been recorded. Yes, there's a loud speaker. They're doing the action for a song. The filming and recording of songs usually done separately these days.

Audience of One

Director Edward Ludwig is settling beneath the balcony, surrounded by half a dozen assistants. "All right, let's shoot it," he commands.

"Places, everybody," shouts an assistant director. The extras rise and start strolling around. They're only in the background and probably won't be noticed. But their absence would be noticed.

The camera starts grinding. It comes the song over the loud speaker. The girls start their action, playing ukuleles and mouthing their words in perfect synchronization to their own voices that they hear coming from the amplifier.

They're actually singing part of the time, just mouthing words the rest of the time. The difference between the sound track they're hearing is the one that will be in the finished picture.

Suddenly the song stops. The actresses relax. "That's okay for me," sings out the cameraman.

"It's not for me," replies Ludwig.

"We'll do it again."

No fun seeing the same thing done over again. Besides, it's getting late. Let's call it a day.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

Went Hunting Into 5-Year Adventure
—"California Joe" Was Famous
Old-Time Plains Scout

Back in 1843 a 14-year-old Kentucky schoolboy got his squirrel rifle and told his folks that he was going out hunting for a day or so. Then he wandered off, and it was five years before his people saw him again; and in those five years he had wandered all over the wild west, fought innumerable Indians, and had a prominent part in the Mexican War.

The schoolboy was named, Moses Milner, and his story is told in "California Joe," by Joe E. Milner and Earle R. Forrest; and the biography makes a fine addition to the history of the west in the days when it was both unrestrained and untrained.

Milner became a plains scout, hunter, and Indian-killer, famous under the nickname of California Joe. He was a friend of Jim Bridger and Kit Carson and Wild Bill Hickok; he was Custer's chief scout in the famous Washita campaign, and to the end of his days he believed the tragedy on the Little Big Horn would have been averted if he only had been there.

His story seems to epitomize the story of the western adventure-seeker. He trapped for furs in Wyoming and Idaho, hunted gold in California, Dakota territory, Colorado, and New Mexico, slew Indians with the free-and-easy nonchalance of one who counts them as vermin, and shot his way out of plenty of scrapes in boom-

These Things Are Free

In gloomy tones we need not cry—"How many things there are to buy!" Here is a thought for you and me—"The best things in life are free!" The sun, the sunshine and the sea. All richness, beauty—these are free. Our faithful friendships, sympathy. The joy of living—these are free. All loving service, loyalty. Our god's protection—these are free. How many precious things are free. The heart will find more than the eye. Of things we do not have to buy. Let's stop and think; let's know and feel. That things like these are truly real. Yes, we think how very rich we are. When all the best of things are free. —N. Y. Times.

Huge Campaign for Gulf Product

Resort to 1,000 Newspapers to Announce New Oil

"More motor oil for less money" might be the title of the large advertising campaign which is now appearing in almost 1,000 newspapers. In publicizing its new Gulf-lube motor oil, a premium grade oil sold at 25c a quart, the Gulf Refining Company reports the facts to over twelve million readers. The latter learn that the lubricant, refined by Gulf's revolutionary Multi-sol Process, has practically all impurities "washed" away at no extra cost to the motorist.

In addition to the thousands of columns of newspaper space occupied by the Gulf Refining Company, extra miles of copy will appear at the best of the 40,000 Gulf dealers located from Maine to Texas. These will go more into detail in advising car owners how to increase their mileage through the use of the new Gulf-lube and how this will give them quicker and easier starting in all kinds of weather.

Further prominence to Gulf-lube will be given in the Gulf Family Weekly, of which two and a half million copies are distributed free every Friday by the Orange district service stations and dealers. After motorists and their children enjoy Curly and the other famous cartoon figures, they will be treated to a full page of facts and testimonials about the amazing new premium 25c-a-quart Motor Oil.

Another medium for the dissemination of information includes many hundreds of colorful highway posters, located on all the main highways. Also, several radio headline programs will interrupt such luminaries as Will Rogers, the Revellers and James Melton only long enough for brief announcements covering Gulf-lube economy and performance.

Methodist Meet Starts Thursday

Revival to Continue Ten Days, Ending on June 9th

A Pentecost revival meeting will be started at First Methodist church Thursday night at 8 o'clock. This meeting is the last part of the Easter to Pentecost revival which has been observed by the Methodists this year. Thursday is Ascension day, the day on which Christ ascended into Heaven. It was on Ascension day that the disciples began to "tarry" in Jerusalem waiting for the promised power of the Holy Ghost.

This meeting will continue for ten days with Sunday, June 9, as the closing day. This is Pentecost day, which Christendom has long recognized as the birthday of the church. On this closing Sunday of the meeting, it is the hope of the pastor that every Methodist living in Hope will attend the morning service.

The services will be held on the church lawn if the weather permits. Lights and seats are being provided. The pastor will do the preaching. A chorus choir will be used, and a cordial invitation is extended to all who can sing to join the choir. The last of the Pentecost mid-week prayer services, in which the Book of Acts is being studied, will be held Wednesday night at 7:45 o'clock. The general public is cordially invited to all of these services. Make a good start for the meeting by attending the mid-week service.

"If that is correct, it is not so much the matter of collecting ransom as it is a reprisal at the lumber family for fancied wrongs. It may be connected in some way with the lumber strike—we are not sure yet."

The official said a scientific study of the ransom note, which bore sinister similarity to the Lindbergh kidnapping letters, indicated "that the note was typed by a woman."

"Further, she was a woman of fine sensibilities," he explained. "For instance, the word kill does not appear in it once. Instead, she used the word 'harm.' We believe most of the contents were dictated to her but that she used her own phrasing."

"In a few places there was glaring errors, but these were so obviously intentional we disregarded them."

Holdup Suspects Are Bound Over

Russell Cooper Held in $22,000 Robbery at Fort Smith

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—Charged by the government with bank robbery and kidnapping arising from the $221,000 robbery of the City National Bank here May 3, Russell Cooper, 39, of Fort Smith, Monday was bound over to await action of the federal grand jury.

Bond of $25,000 was fixed for Cooper, at a commissioner's hearing from which spectators were excluded. No defense testimony was offered and district attorney C. R. Barry presented only a portion of his case.

Cooper was named by Mrs. Howard Schuster as the man who paid rent on a garage in which was stored an automobile the government alleges figured in the holdup.

It was contended that Cooper was an acquaintance of Dewey Gilmore, Missouri bank robbery fugitive arrested last week near Dallas, Texas. Authorities have announced that Gilmore, held by department of justice agents at an unannounced jail, will be brought here this week to face charges in connection with the City National raid.

Barry announced late Monday additional charges possibly will be filed against Cooper. The new charges if filed, will charge Cooper with receiving and concealing a stolen car transported in interstate traffic, Barry said.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! QUINS ARE YEAR OLD TODAY!

There Were So Many Babies We Couldn't Show Them All, So Here's Yvonne, Pat-a-Caking Her Delight for You

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
"It-m-m-m! Such a pretty birthday cake," Yvonne seems to muse. "Seems a shame to spoil it. Still, it looks so delicious . . ."

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
That cake tasted better than she thought it would. In fact, it's so good that Yvonne can't eat it fast enough. She appears pleased over her discovery that the two pudgy hands can convey that sweet frosting to her mouth ever so much faster than one.

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
For a moment Yvonne suspends operations on the cake to look about and see if anyone has noted her progress. Then . . .

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Since she couldn't have her cake and eat it, too, Yvonne has apparently decided in favor of the latter.

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Exuberantly, she begins clapping. After all, that cake is good, and if grown-ups applaud things they like, why shouldn't she?

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Like man, the quintuplets want but little here below. Just an ordinary birthday candle furnishes chubby Yvonne with a fund of quiet amusement.

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
From those crumbs on her face, it appears that Yvonne ate not wisely but too well of her birthday cake. Isn't she the picture of childish guilt as Nurse Leroux gently chides her?

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.
Reading a birthday greeting upside down, in fact reading anything, is still a difficult feat for Yvonne, but that doesn't keep her from having a try.

NRA Enforcement in U. S. Suspended

Vast Code Structure Is Destroyed by Court Decision

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—Regional National Recovery administration with headquarters in Dallas instructed the Arkansas NRA office Tuesday to suspend all enforcement activities for the present time.

The Arkansas office will continue only in administrative capacity under direct activities of President Roosevelt's re-employment agreement which is on a contract basis between the employer and the government.

This section of NRA activities was not held invalid by the United States Supreme Court decision Monday.

Seek New Law

WASHINGTON—(P)—The NRA, its vast code structure destroyed by Monday's Supreme Court decision of unconstitutionality, suspended "all methods of compulsory enforcement."

After the court held unanimously that the president had been given to much "unfettered" authority in proclaiming codes, and that code provisions went too far in regulations affecting intra-state commerce, the administration took two preliminary steps.

Donald Richberg, NRA administrator, after a conference with President Roosevelt, issued a plea that employers continue to operate under their codes until a new law could be enacted.

Richberg added:

"This decision of the court makes codes of fair competition unenforceable as a matter of law; and in deference to that ruling all methods of compulsory enforcement of the codes will be immediately suspended."

"This will not affect the enforcement of any contractual obligations which may have arisen by agreement of the parties requiring no sanction of a federal authority."

Confusion and bewilderment followed the decision, delivered by Chief Justice Hughes.

He ruled that in the A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Company case, upon which the decision was based, that congress had no authority to tell a poultry dealer whose activities did not directly affect interstate commerce what wages he should pay his employees and how long they should work.

The president summoned his chief legal aides and sought without immediate success a means of creating a new NRA.

New Dealers fear the effect of the decision on other administration measures—the codes of AAA, federal control of the liquor industry and the Wagner labor disputes bill, designed to supplement the famous Section 7-A Labor law, was bitterly disappointed.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, hastened to Washington, promising a statement later. Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, warned that immediate strikes would result if manufacturers violate the textile code's wage and hour provisions.

Arkansas Golf Tourney Starts

Curtis Collier Defends Title at Texarkana Country Club

TEXARKANA—Curtis Collier, defending champion from Fort Smith, left the first tee at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday with Jack Tinnin, ranking favorite from Little Rock, in the first round of round of match play in the twentieth annual Arkansas amateur golf tournament being played at the Texarkana Country Club.

Collier, who was not forced to qualify, is conceded little chance to repeat since he has failed to control his game in the past few weeks. Tinnin, picked by many as the actual favorite, barely got under the wire in the qualifying round due to a bad series of wood shots.

J. K. Wadley, Texarkana veteran, grabbed off the entire spotlight for 36 hole qualifying rounds with the low score of 54 for the day.

He teed off with George Bell, also of Texarkana, who after shooting a 78 in the morning round, Monday, blue up with a 90 in the afternoon. Steve Creekmore, four times champion, of Fort Smith, was on the course in a first round match with Paul Reverra, young hard hitting Texarkanian.

NRA Workers Are Worried Over Jobs

Government Employees Not So Sure After Court Decision

WASHINGTON—(P)—NRA's 4500 employees forced themselves to smile Tuesday but inside their heads this question thudded:

"How about my job?"

No one in authority seemed to know whether there would be a general demobilization. Everyone was talking about it.

The exuberance that shot the blue eagle on its flight almost two years ago was gone—dead as NRA's code, or that dodo General Johnson mentioned.

For weeks there had been uncertainty over NRA's future—uncertainty largely over congressional action. The supreme court's blast was as startling as an exploding shell in this government bureau.

Up to Monday, one couldn't get a dyed-in-the-wood NRA worker to admit even the possibility that the high court might be adverse. The blue eagle's wings might be clipped, its enthusiasts said, but it could not be killed.

But there were "wakes" Monday night. And headaches Tuesday.

What's This? Washington Crossing the Danube?

When armies come to rivers they want to get across, they often must take to the boats. Such an extremity gave us the dramatic picture of "Washington Crossing the Delaware"—an heroic figure standing by facing the elements while his troops crouch in a shelter of the boat's gunwales. Taking a lesson from the great American leader, Austrian troops during maneuvers practiced crossing the Danube in boats. An alert cameraman photographed this scene, which, except for the very Teutonic steel helmets and the ominous modern weapons of the troops, might be a portrayal of Washington's epic journey.

Like small boys whistling their way past a graveyard, some tried to wisecrack. Some expressed a belief born of hope that new legislation would repair the damage.

Others were frankly worried. "One had left a newspaper job recently. 'At the time I thought it was a smart move,' he smiled wryly 'I'm not so sure now.'"

Long Will Press Electric Inquiry

Twelve Companies Are Affected by the Action

BATON ROUGE, La. — (AP) — The Louisiana public service commission Tuesday announced it had authorized Senator Huey P. Long, its special counsel, to prosecute a state-wide investigation of electric rates.

The commission decided by resolution signed by its three members to empower Long to institute a general inquiry into the rates of all electric utilities in Louisiana that have not already been investigated.

Twelve companies are affected by the action.

Two major companies, the New Orleans Public Service, Inc., and the Baton Rouge Electric company, already have been investigated.

The former's rate Monday night were announced reduced to small consumers and the latter's underwent a general cut several weeks ago.

P. A. Frye, commission secretary said that before any citations were served upon any of the companies that a survey will be made of their existing rate schedules to determine prima facie likelihood for any reduction.

Long will press the investigation in a continuous line of his campaign of rate readjustment against utilities under recent special session acts.

One act under which he has been proceeding requires a utility to defray the expense of being investigated, and another places utilities operating exclusively in cities under the supervision of the public service commission.

If postoffice officials continue to trace down those send-a-dime chains, they'll probably find at the end a bunch of missing links.
